1. The airfield about 1.3 miles north of LUNIN (26°48'E/52°14'N), White Russian SSR, east of the railroad line to BARANOVICKI (26°03'E/53°08'N), was occupied by German troops in World War II and improved by the Soviets in 1947.
2. Several wooden hangars were being built. Several long wooden cantonment buildings to serve as quarters were under construction on the edge of the field.
3. About 60 single-engine fighters, twin-engine aircraft, and single-engine biplanes were parked at the field.
4. Individual practice flying and formations of up to 27 aircraft were daily observed. The fighters frequently practiced firing at ground targets in the area east of town.

Comment:

a. The information on the improvement and occupation of the LUNIN airfield, known from previous reports, is considered credible. The reported location is correct.

b. From the observed 60 single-engine fighters and other twin-engine aircraft and the performed formation flying, it is assumed that two fighter regiments and one bomber unit are stationed at the field. Reports covering a more recent period are required to confirm and supplement this information.

This document is hereby regraded to CONFIDENTIAL in accordance with the letter of 18 October 1978 from the Director of Central Intelligence to the Archivist of the United States.
